The Pacific War Memorial in Hawaii

A project of the Pacific War Memorial Association

Memorial Rendering by Hitoshi Hida
Group 70

During WWII, preparations for the harrowing 36-day Battle of Iwo Jima took place on Guam, on the "Big Island" of Hawaii and on Maui. On Feb. 23, 1945, American flags were raised on Mt. Suribachi, signifying Allied determination, jointness of effort, and victory with great sacrifice in the Pacific. The capture of Iwo Jima saved thousands of B-29 flights and the lives of over 25,000 Army Air Corps crewmen.

At last, a symbol of this victory is in the Pacific!
Help us pay tribute to all who have served to protect our freedom.

The Pacific War Memorial Association, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization, has erected a Pacific War Memorial on the Island of Oahu. It is located at the front gate of Marine Corps Base-Hawaii overlooking Kaneohe Bay.

Surrounding the base is a "Walkway of Honor" with (4x8 inch) engraved stones paying tribute to veterans, active duty personnel, their loved ones, and other individuals who have contributed $100 or more. There is a maximum of 3 lines of 20 characters (spaces and punctuation marks are counted as characters). Each stone will be set apart by adjacent stones without inscription.

Limited edition, signed and numbered 11 x 17 inch prints of artist Hitoshi Hida's rendering of the memorial (shown above) are also available for $100 donations. For $500 donations, larger 24 x 36 inch prints are available.

Donations are welcomed for this tribute. Please make checks payable to:
